Dear Sir:

There is no prima facie case of obviousness under 35 U.S.C. §103 and none of Applicant's claims can be considered obvious. There is no motivation for making the proposed combination of Savino, et al. and Sandhu, et al. Where a proposed combination goes contrary to the teachings of the primary reference, there is no motivation for making it and the combination cannot be made. In this instance, Savino, et al. explicitly teach that information associated with the bar code of that reference is only entered by the customer in order to ensure reliability of such information. (See, e.g., column 4, lines 17-35 and 45-47). If one were to modify Savino, et al. by incorporating teachings from Sandhu, et al. in an attempt to somehow make an arrangement consistent with Applicant's invention (e.g., to make an arrangement where someone other than the customer enters the information), that would require violating the intentions of the

67,010-005; H2602-FN

Savino, et al. reference. Such a modification cannot be made because it is directly contrary to the statement in Savino, et al. There is no prima facie case of obviousness.

The proposed addition of the teachings of Johnston does not remedy the defect in the basic combination. None of Applicant's claims can be considered obvious.

Additionally, Applicant notes that the Examiner refers to Applicant's own specification when attempting to explain how there is somehow some motivation for combining the references. Applicant's own specification cannot be used as a basis for finding motivation to combine references. That is exactly the kind of hindsight reasoning that is prohibited when attempting to establish a prima facie case of obviousness under 35 U.S.C. §103.

Respectfully submitted,

CARLSON, GASKEY & OLDS
